RED GUARD AND REVOLUTIONARY REBEL ORGANIZATIONS IN COMMUNIST CHINA

(A RESEARCH AID)

Introduction

These working charts, prepared by the DDI/Special Research Staff, are drawn from a larger analytical study (in progress) of the Red Guard movement in Communist China. An attempt has been made to identify the major Red Guard and Revolutionary Rebel groups in each province, autonomous region, and major city, to list the opponents as well as the allies of these groups, to note shifts in these alliances over time, and to provide a brief chronology (where possible) of the varying fortunes of these organizations as of May 1968.

Users of these charts should note the following two points. First, the description of a given Red Guard or Revolutionary Rebel group as "revolutionary," "conservative," "counterrevolutionary," and so forth, is in every case taken from official Chinese Communist statements (e.g., Mao Tse-tung, Chou En-lai, Madame Mao, the Central Committee, the Central CRG) and does not represent a judgment of the DDI/SRS. These statements are usually found in Red Guard sources, but are believed to be accurately rendered. On the other hand, Red Guard pronouncements per se as to the political leanings of their own or other groups have not been used, as they are notoriously biased and misleading.

Second, allied and opposing groups are identified only on the basis of concrete evidence. For example, in a given province, group "1" may be opposed by groups "2" and "3", but the inference does not necessarily follow that groups "2" and "3" are allies (the three groups may, in fact, be mutually hostile).

The DDI/SRS would welcome comment on these working charts, addressed to either the Chief of the Staff or the compiler, Dennis Doolin,

NOTE

The number under the columns labelled "Opponents" and "Supporters" refers to the number assigned arbitrarily by the compiler to each Red Guard or Revolutionary Rebel group. For example, in Anhwei Province, "27 August" (group #4) is supported by #10 (Red Guard Army) and opposed by #11 (Army Command). In Chekiang Province, #1 is opposed by #3 and #25, but supported by groups 11 through 20. These numbers are not intended to indicate any hierarchy of importance or power among the various Red Guard groups in a given province. They are solely for purposes of identification in this publication.

The user will also note the detailed listing of Red Guard groups for some areas (Peking, Kwangtung, etc.) and the brief compilations for others (Kirin, Ninghsia, Shensi). The brevity of the latter is due solely to lack of information.

September 1966: the appearance of three RG Hqs:
1st Hqs - full name: Capital Univs and Colls RG 1st Hqs
(soon active in Shanghai and Kweichow; little influence after early November 1966)
2nd Hqs - full name: 2nd Hqs Revy Rebel Liaison Station
(strongest during early November 1966; backed by a faction of Peking Geology "East-is-Red"; opposed by Peking Aviation Red Flag)
3rd Hqs - full name: Capital RG Third Hqs
(emerged as the most powerful organization, with Peking Univ, Tsinghua and Peking Aviation among its members; active in Shanghai during December 1966-January 1967)

1 October 1966: RG Control Squads reportedly disbanded; certain activities continued, however, under the title of United Action Ctte (lien-tung), a nation-wide RG organization.

23 December 1966: Chou En-lai demanded Peking RG consolidation at a meeting of 1st, 2nd and 3rd Hqs.

17 January 1967: Madame Mao spoke to meetings of 1st, 2nd and 3rd Hqs, apparently to attempt consolidation.

CHRONOLOGY OF EVENTS:

17 February 1967: Shanghai Public Security Bureau declared the following two groups to be c-revy: Red Flag Army Shanghai GHQ and Red Flag Army First Column Shanghai GHQ. Members of these groups were workers, peasants and disabled, rehabilitated, demobilized and discharged servicemen.

20 May-8 June 1967: Tungchi Univ RGs reportedly authorized by Shanghai Municipal Revy Ctte to embark on a revy liaison mission to Chengtu and Ipin (Szechwan) as a reward for their "key role" in the January Revolution. Similar permission was denied to RGs from Futan Univ and the Shanghai Marine Institute.

mid-September 1967: Shanghai revy workers organizations realized RGA. Also in mid-September, Shanghai univs and colls realized RGA. (Chiaotung, Futan and Shanghai Normal were cited by name. Some nine other univs and colls, not identified, were reportedly parties to the alliance.)

17 November 1967: Shanghai Univs and Colls RG Congress est.
